A Garden

A garden is a bit of space on which, in blooms of blue and pink are written with exquisite grace the noblest thoughts we think. That beauty words cannot express. Those deep, unspoken thoughts we hold of faith, in summer all can dress in phrase made of marigold. Those pictures we should paint, had we Received the artist's gift divine. Are brushed for passers-by to see in candid and columbine. A garden is an outside room where men and women brave reveal their heart's desire in bits of bloom which time would otherwise conceal. —Selected.

Mrs. George Crevier, president, led in the impressive ritual and following the opening order of procedure, a short business period was held after which Mrs. J. F. Gorin presented a most interesting program on "The South in the Building of a Nation." Mrs. H. C. Whitworth discussed "Changes Wrought by the South." Mrs. W. W. Weekly Sunday School Lesson

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of AdvancePaul Works a Hard Field
Text: Acts 18:1, 4-11; 1 Corinthians 2:1-5.

The method of Paul's preaching was to attend the synagogue wherever he went, presenting to those of his own religion and race what he conceived to be the fulfillment of the religious teaching of the Old Testament prophets in the coming of Jesus, the Messiah, and in the Gospel concerning His life, death and resurrection. Apparently Greeks or Gentiles were in the synagogue as well, and were interested in Paul and in his teachings.

It throws considerable light upon the progressive nature of Jewish culture and religion that the synagogue should have been to such an extent a place of open meeting and discussion.

It seems to have been in some respects a sort of forum of religion, and this fact should not be lost sight of in recognizing that many of the Jews showed the hostile attitude toward Paul and his teaching that has been common on the part of religious peoples in every age and country toward those who have seemed to be setting up new teaching.

In religious circles particularly, where opinions are decided and convictions strong, the attitude of hostility to anyone who seems to be an innovator or to be departing from commonly accepted conceptions of a truth is so widely prevalent as to be almost normal.

The thing that is really worthy of comment is that, in spite of all this, both synagogues and churches—regardless of all their narrowness—have after all been the chief places of promulgating religious truth.

Paul found the opposition of some of the Jews so strong that he turned to the Gentiles and made the chief center of his propaganda the house of Titus Justus, whose house was adjacent to the synagogue.

The inference would be that, though Titus Justus was a devout man who worshiped God, he was a Gentile who had accepted the Jewish teaching concerning the one God. But Crispus, the ruler of the synagogue, was among those who accepted Paul's preaching, and with many other Corinthians, he was baptized.

Paul seems to have been in the midst of a great deal of ferment in spite of the encouragement he received because by night there came a vision to him, giving him strength and urging him that he should not be afraid.

The result was that Paul spent one of the longest periods of his whole missionary journeys in the city of Corinth, staying at that time for a whole year and six months, presumably following his occupation as a tentmaker while teaching the word of God. It is interesting, in the light of Paul's experiences in Corinth and his long stay there, to read Paul's letters to the Corinthians—the longest two of his Epistles.

The portion of the Epistle attached to this lesson brings very vividly before us Paul's recollection of his time spent in Corinth and the spirit in which he had carried on his ministry there. The church at Corinth had eminent and fluent speakers, like Apollos, and in contrast with these, Paul who was evidently not so fluent, felt his weakness.

It is strange to find a man who seems so bold and courageous in matters of faith admitting that he was with the Corinthians "in weakness, and in fear, and in much trembling." It throws an interesting light upon what great faith and strong convictions can do to overcome natural weakness and hesitation.

"The South Carolina and Georgia Almanack" for 1764 is believed by experts to have been the first book ever published in Georgia.

Feller's Wildness Proves Downfall

Walks 10 Men as Yankees Win 10-Inning Victory

CLEVELAND.—(AP)—Bobby Feller's old fault, wildness, caught up with him again Thursday and gave the New York Yankees a 10-to-6 10-inning victory over the Cleveland Indians although the scouled slugging champions were out 11-1.

The Yankees drew a dozen passes to first and 10 of them came from Feller, who had won three games and lost none prior to Thursday's catastrophe. Four walks, one single and an error supplied New York its four winning runs in the extra chapter. Except for the second and third innings when he struck out five men, Feller was obviously off form and in addition to the bases on balls he gave up 10 hits before being relieved with none out in the tenth.

George Selkirk hit his third home run of the season behind singles by Tom Henrich and Charley Keller in the fourth. Bump Hadley, first of four pitchers to work for the Yankees, singled home another run in the sixth after Feller had walked two, and the champions tied up the score in the ninth on Henrich's double, Bill Dickey's single, an intentional pass to Selkirk and Joe Gordon's single.

Feller did his best to help his own cause at the plate, with a double, a single and two walks giving him a perfect day. He scored the Tribe's first run in the fifth on his double. Roy Weatherly's double and Hal Trasky's sacrifice fly. The Indians sent Hadley to the showers in the sixth with four runs on three singles, a walk and Weatherly's triple. Feller batted in one and scored one of the runs. Trasky's second sacrifice fly of the game scored Cleveland's last run in the eighth when Rookie Marvin Bremer allowed a double, a walk and a safe hit to fill the bases.

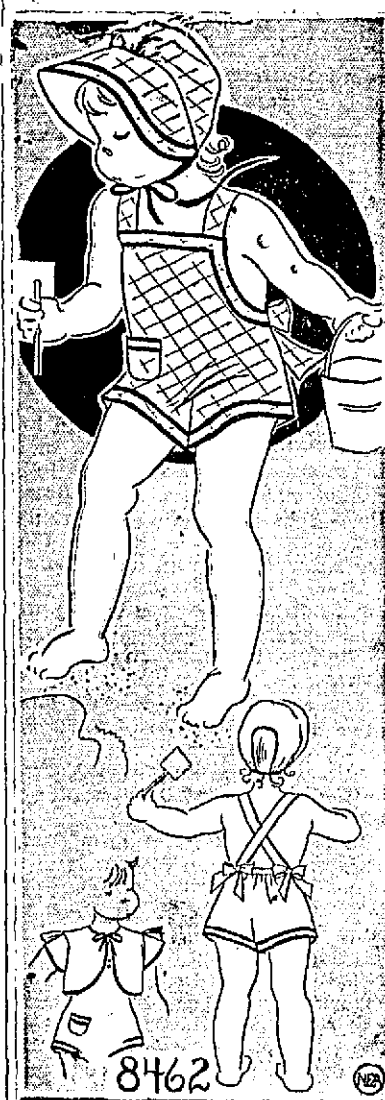

Town Has No Postoffice

SIAM, la.—(AP)—Siam has no postoffice. Three rural mail routes run directly through this town of about one hundred residents. One comes from New Market, la.; one from Bedford, la.; and one from Hopkins, Mo.

And that, the citizens opine, is better service than lots of towns with postoffices get.

New Three-Piece Play Suit For Little Fresh Air Fans

By CAROL DAY

Here's a practical, comfortable ensemble for active sports that every tot should have. It comprises a scrap of play suit, a bolero to slip on when sun-tanning is not in order, and an eye-catching bow.

Totalitarian Edge in "War" Picture

Present Debate Is Process of "Making a Case," Writer Says

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
AP Feature Service Writer
WASHINGTON — While the headlines give you a blow-by-blow account of the argument between President Roosevelt and the German and Italian dictators, there's something more significant in the debate than the headlines tell, namely:

That the heads of great powers deem it wise to argue at all rather than shoot first and explain later.

The mere fact that an argument is under way is a tribute to public opinion as a world-wide force to be reckoned with. It is ample proof that no leader can afford to start a war without his making some kind of case to prove he is a defender of his nation—not a Napoleon bent on aggression.

This is the first instance in the history of major disputes when the public got at least a part of the cases for and against war before hostilities opened up. Up until now great crises have been thrust out behind locked doors. If war resulted, then it was time enough to explain, to a blindly loyal public what the shooting was all about.

No "Hidden Ball"

It is true, of course, that the public doesn't see every play even yet. But the plays it misses because they are made so rapidly or involve such complex diplomacy are minor ones. In the past, the public has waited months or years to get even fairly accurate picture of what happened to push men into war. The World War is an apt illustration. Half a generation elapsed before historians got at private papers and other secret documents to piece together exactly what happened from day to day and hour to hour, just before the fateful declarations. Even yet there are arguments as to who started that war.

But since the World War the public has become more wary. No leader dares to ignore the public on national crises. He tries to prepare the public mind for what he's doing. Maybe he tells the truth; maybe not—but he does plead his case before shooting.

Also, in a crisis, nations scramble to win public opinion abroad. France like Germany's "room to live" and the Franco-British "peace front" count not only domestic support, but also world approval.

Totalitarian Edge

In this struggle, dictators have a distinct advantage in their own national control over what their people see, hear and read. If you can control information, you can adopt clever tactics toward them. Public Opinion, and she's yours, whether she likes it or not—until you lose your grip.

By the same token, governments in the United States and Great Britain are handicapped on the domestic scene regardless of their political composition—because they must win public opinion gently. They must run the gauntlet of open criticism as a normal democratic process. In so doing they are constantly running the risk of disapproval and ruin. That brings danger of temporary confusion and weakness in national policy.

But on the world stage, the shoe is on the other foot. Great Britain and the United States—rather than their governments—have the upper hand because they are trained to state their cases persuasively, and because they profess no control over the thoughts of their citizens and subjects.

The dictator, on the other hand, must reverse his tactics on the world stage. No longer can he direct public opinion to believe as he says. He must also be persuasive. He must also have a case.

And it's simply that process of making a case that is monopolizing your newspaper's front pages these days.

Muddy Track for Kentucky Derby

Weather Bureau Predicts First Rainy Derby Since 1935

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(AP)—It looks like mud for Derby Day. The Weather Bureau prediction for the first rainy derby since Omaha in '35 gave the mud-runners like Technician, Challenge and Xalapa Clown, as well as the lightly-regarded outsiders such as Challenge, El Chico and Heather Broom, new hope to cope with the speed of William Woodward's highly-favored Johnstown.

Several others, like Porter's Mite, W. E. Boeing's bay sprinter, Junius Bell's Steel Heels, and Mrs. Ethel Mars' No Competition, found it a tough old world. The Mite was definitely declared out of the $50,000 mile-and-a-quarter classic Saturday because his handlers explained, he "just isn't right."

His withdrawal came as no particular surprise, for observers were convinced the son of Porter would never go in that last long quarter mile.

Steel Heels' slim chances of starting hung in the balance as Owner Bell and Trainer Frank Letellier argued it. Bell didn't think the hopes of the brown son of Harry Baker were worth the $500 entry fee. Mrs. Mars finally decided to start On Location, a bay colt by Teddy Cinema, rather than No Competition, because of On Location's recent workouts.

Heather Broom on Trial

None of the shorter-priced entries was worked more than a gallop Thursday, but Earl Sande sent his J. H. Whitney hopeful, Heather Broom, through a mile time trial in 1:44 3-5.

and T. M. Dorsett, Joe W. Brown's Col. Short Colt, having recovered from a slight fever, had a turn over the same distance between races on the afternoon program at the Downs.

Make it mud for the Derby, and the second and third favorites, Herbert M. Woolf's Technician and W. L. Brann's Chaledon, can make plenty of trouble for Woodward's Johnstown. Chaledon is generally recognized as the superior mudder of the field, with probably only Mrs. Bessie Franzheim's Xalapa Clown having as large an advantage in the slop.

"You know," Owned Woolf explained Thursday, "Chaledon may be the best mudder in the field. But we'd like to have him to beat Chaledon than Johnstown. That's the only fellow we're afraid of, and if it rains when'll he be with all his speed?"

No one has asked Johnston that yet, but there's a sneaky suspicion that despite the fact he is a blazing speedster, he'll have something to say in mud, too. But the major break if wet weather comes may be for two other colts, William Ziegler Jr.'s El Chico and Johnston's giant stablemate, Challenge.

that the citizenship of the state does not have the right and should not have the right to decide on the wisdom of the levy of the sales tax for the maintenance of the state institutions and other agencies, no matter how worthy they might be; and certainly none are more worthy than these which the present sales tax law contributes to. However, we feel that the attention of the citizenship of Hempstead county should be called to the fact that should the people for their consideration in November, 1940, that Arkansas would be without a sales tax law from July 1, 1939 until the general election in November, 1940, regardless of how the people voted on the question in that general election. The institutions which are mentioned above cannot function properly without the sales tax revenue during that interval. Governor Bailey has indicated that he will call a special session of the legislature to pass a new sales tax law containing an emergency clause to prevent this loss during this interval should the Arkansas Taxpayers League obtain sufficient signatures to refer Act 364. This special session will cost the state from $5 to 40 thousand dollars, an expenditure that is unnecessary and one which no organization such as the so-called Arkansas Taxpayers League should force upon the state.

We, therefore, urge the citizens of Hempstead county to consider very carefully all the facts connected with this question before signing any petition which will abolish the sales tax at a time when the legislature would have no opportunity to even attempt to replace the revenue so badly needed.

Respectfully submitted,

W. S. Atkins

May Revive Old Port

LONDON.—(AP)—The "dead" port of Pugham Harbor, which was the home of Thomas Becket, may be revived as a base for Britain's transatlantic flying boats. Experts estimated that the harbor, 70 miles from London, could be converted into a suitable base at a cost of $4,000,000.
